To whom it may concern:

Susan Gerlovina has completed her 610A Clinical Practicum under my supervision at the Downtown Brooklyn Speech, Language, and Hearing Clinic of Long Island University in the Fall of 2019. Throughout this period, Susan was working with a very challenging client who exhibited speech and language delays due to a diagnosis of ASD. Susan's responsibilities included planning and implementing session goals, creating procedures and activities, collecting data, and writing SOAP notes and weekly session plans. Susan was very successful in applying techniques and strategies to improve her client's language and sound production skills. This particular client had challenging behaviors and very strong personality; however, Susan was able to create a reinforcing and positive environment to address this client's needs to improve his attention and to regulate his behavior. Susan has been a hard-working and dedicated student. Her paperwork was always done in a timely fashion. Within the four months of her clinical experience, Susan has grown to be more a knowledgeable clinician with strong clinical skills. With confidence, I recommend Susan Gerlovina for her future placements.
